That's right: a year's worth of beer is up for grabs from the brewery - a crate a month for you to share with your friends or drink responsibly yourself. In that crate will be, of course, the fantastic new Lumina IPA, a beer which has been made with premium Maris Otter barley and a number of fantastic hops that give it a lovely aroma of mango and pineapple. Lumina is also vegan Friendly and gluten Free.

Beer brewing uses a great deal of water. About five gallons are required to produce one gallon of beer. And water access has become a problem for some growing craft breweries on the West Coast, which has been experiencing a major drought for the past couple years. But even in Southern California, water remains so cheap that it's not a serious concern for most breweries when it comes to pricing.
