Herding and Hunting. Archaeological excavations revealed the main source of the Khoikhoi's daily nourishment: meat gathered from hunting and herding (CHNM). Bones of sheep, cattle, and seals from as early as 2,000 years ago noted the coexistence between the two disciplines of herding and hunting (Smith). Professor Andrew Smith of the University of Capetown's Department of Archaeology explains, "when a herder lost stock, through theft, drought, etc. he could always fall back on hunting, and ...
