By Marjane Satrapi, as told to Pantheon staff Chances are that if you are an American you know very little about the 1979 Iranian Revolution. "This revolution was normal, and it had to happen," says Marjane Satrapi, author of Persepolis, a totally unique memoir about growing up in Iran after the Shah left power. "Unfortunately, it happened in a country where people were very traditional, and other countries only saw the religious fanatics who made their response public."

Satrapi's novel makes space for the dissenting subversive voices that do not suit the central discourse very well. Satrapi's voices come from the margin. This is perhaps why, unlike her more linear and chronological works in the Persepolis, Satrapi chooses to break out of the margins in Embroideries. As the graphics spill over the edges of the pages, refuse to be bound by margins and neat boxes and often focus on a dialogic construction of women in circles.

Stitching It All Up: Review of Marjane Satrapi's Embroideries

Marjane Satrapi "Embroideries". Translated from the Persian by Richard McGill Murphy. Pantheon, 2005. After a hearty lunch in Tehran, the men go off to sleep while the women wash the dishes. Marji prepares the samovar, steeping the tea for the proper forty-five minutes. She serves the older women in the drawing room, and thus begins an Olympic bout of trashtalking, Iranian style.
