Kant's metaphysics involve the ideas of actions which are based on "goodwill," "maxims" which are the groundwork for all of our decisions and actions in life, and hoping that these decisions come a priori to us, or come naturally to us. He also explains that we should act on maxims that would become "universal laws" for other people, I suppose that means only acting on maxims that other people could learn from, and that only the end result of an action matters (so long as it ...

"Metaphysics" is the study of pure concepts as they relate to moral or physical experience. People generally presume that moral principles must apply to all rational beings at all places and all times. Moral principles must therefore be based on concepts of reason, as opposed to particularities of culture or personality.
