Man Myth And Magic Rpg

Gameplay. Man, Myth & Magic is set in historical times on Earth, drawing on myths and legends from 4000 BCE to 400 CE. Character generation is determined randomly, including nationality, race, and character traits (strength, speed, endurance, intelligence, courage, and skill). Because of the randomness of nationality and race, which can range from ancient Britain to the Far East, there is little chance that a party of adventurers will represent a historically accurate mix of characters.

A character's endurance and courage determine how long he can stay in a fight before having to rest. Speed affects how many attacks you can make per turn and helps determine initiative. Power is gained by finding gold and enduring adventures. It's kind of like XP, but also used for magic and adjusting your skill roll.

Unfortunately, Man, Myth & Magic wasn't quite the game I was hoping it was. Though it can be charitably called a historical fantasy, it's somewhat unclear exactly what history it's meant to represent. As written, it's supposed to cover 5000 years of history, from 4000 B.C. to 1000 A.D.

The old Man, Myth, and Magic rpg had a scenario with a werewolf terrorizing a village. I converted it to GURPS and ran a group through it and it went well. Oh the module is named The Werewolf of Europe. It has an interesting twist that I won't spoil despite the module being ancient and probably mostly unknown.
